

WILLIAM CONTROL

TO PLAY APRIL 2013 WHITBY GOTH WEEKEND

We're both proud and excited to announce that William Control will be performing at the forthcoming WGW on Saturday 27th April 2013.

Wil Francis formed William Control because he was interested in making music that didn't match the style of his other band, Aiden. In 2008 William Control released their debut album Hate Culture which is, as explained in a Kerrang! magazine interview, the story of a man named William Control and his last night on Earth because he wishes to kill himself.

Although an act worthy of headlining in their own right, due to their late addition to the line up they have extremely graciously agreed to open the evening's entertainment - but we are also delighted to announce that William Control will return to headline the Friday night of our Halloween event on 1st November 2013.

As we now have 5 bands performing on Saturday evening, we anticipate that William Control's performance will commence at 7pm so be sure to head down early to see this highly acclaimed act.

Ticket prices remain the same at £29 per evening or £55 for the weekend, and we will also continue to run our early bird door offer - anyone coming through the doors of the event each evening before 8pm has the added perk of a chance to win free tickets to the November 2013 WGW as well as some fab drinks promotions.

Find out more about William Control:

<http://williamcontrol.com/>

<http://williamcontrol.com/videos/>

<http://www.myspace.com/williamcontrol>

http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/William_Control

Find out more about WGW April 2013 in our pre-event guide:

<http://www.whitbygothweekend.co.uk/information.php>

